

Nematrian's Approach to and Policy on Intellectual Property

Nematrian website page: [IntellectualProperty, © Nematrian 2015]

Nematrian takes seriously intellectual property (IP), not least because it (and, in their own right, its shareholders and employees) have significant investments in IP and it is hoping to obtain revenues from this IP. For example:

- (a) Nematrian has invested heavily in the development of algorithms and copyrighted content in the development of its website, and in the development of its own brand, and expects to add to this investment through time.
- (b) It and its shareholders and employees have patent applications (or revenue sharing arrangements in relation to such applications) relating to the operation of the site, or expect to have in due course as the site develops.

If you believe that Nematrian is infringing your intellectual property (whether copyright, patents or trademarks etc.) then please contact us with your concerns. You may contact us electronically, see our Contact Us page, or by writing to:

The Intellectual Property Officer
c/o Unit 24, Capital Business Centre
22 Carlton Road
South Croydon
Surrey CR2 0BS
United Kingdom

We will use our best endeavours to address your concerns once we are made aware of them. Please bear in mind that Nematrian has no control over the content of other people's or organisations' website.

We also take seriously data ownership rights. If you are concerned that a user of the Nematrian website is using the website in ways that infringe your intellectual property (or are objectionable to you in other ways) then please also contact us as above with your concerns.

Please note that Nematrian may have obligations to its users and others, e.g. arising from the Nematrian License Agreement and, in the absence of court instructions on what it should do, may need to weigh up these obligations against what you perceive to be your rights if it perceives them to be in conflict.

Please also see Nematrian's Privacy Policy for details of Nematrian's policy on personal information or other information it holds or may collect on its users, since by contacting us you may be providing personal information to us.
